Editorial board

Acta Neuropsychiatrica is an international journal focussing on translational neuropsychiatry. It publishes high-quality original research papers and reviews. The Journal's scope specifically highlights the pathway from discovery to clinical applications, healthcare and global health that can be viewed broadly as the spectrum of work that marks the pathway from discovery to global health. The steps of translation that are within the scope include: 1) fundamental discovery, 2) bench to bedside, 3) clinical trials, 4) translation to clinical guidelines, 5) health policy and usage, and 6) global health. Research covering molecular biology, genetics, pharmacology, imaging and epidemiology is welcome as it contributes to enhancing the field.

This journal is a member of the NPRC, an alliance of neuroscience journals that share manuscript reviews with other NPRC members at the author's request.

The NPRC system facilitates fast-track review and publication of neuroscience research, and reduces the burden on peer reviewers.

Defined by DSM-5-TR as a neurodevelopmental disorder Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) has attracted ever-mounting attention from the public, coupled with a growing interest from clinicians, researchers, and patients. This is reflected in significantly higher demand for clinical assessments and frequent media reports of a surge in ADHD cases

Abstract

Introduction

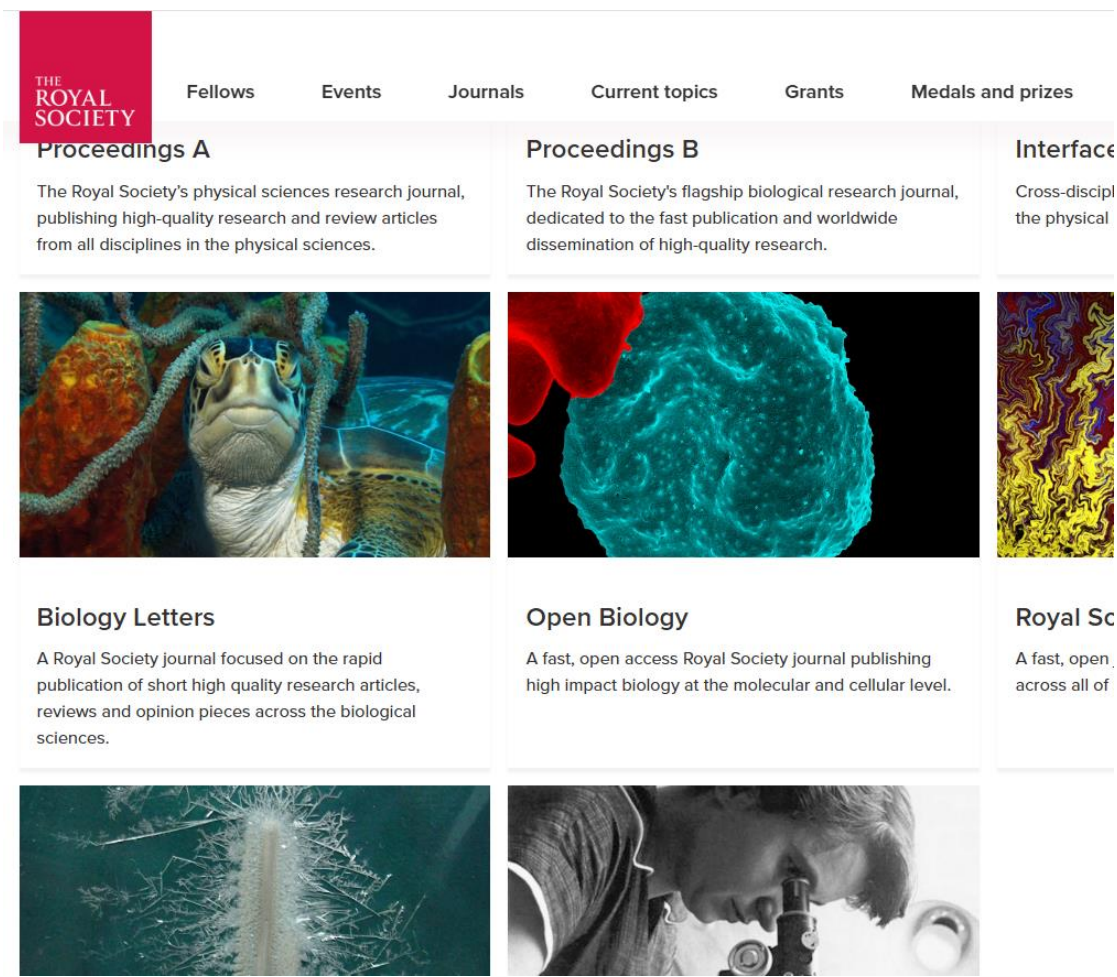

The distribution of adipose tissue and fibrosis in the heart is important because of its associations with cardiovascular conditions. However, research on the specific locations of adipocytes and fibrosis across the four cardiac chambers of the heart remains limited. Our study aimed to quantify the distribution of adipocytes and fibrosis across the four chambers of the human heart and to relate these structural findings to the causes of death in the post-mortem cases.

Materials and Methods

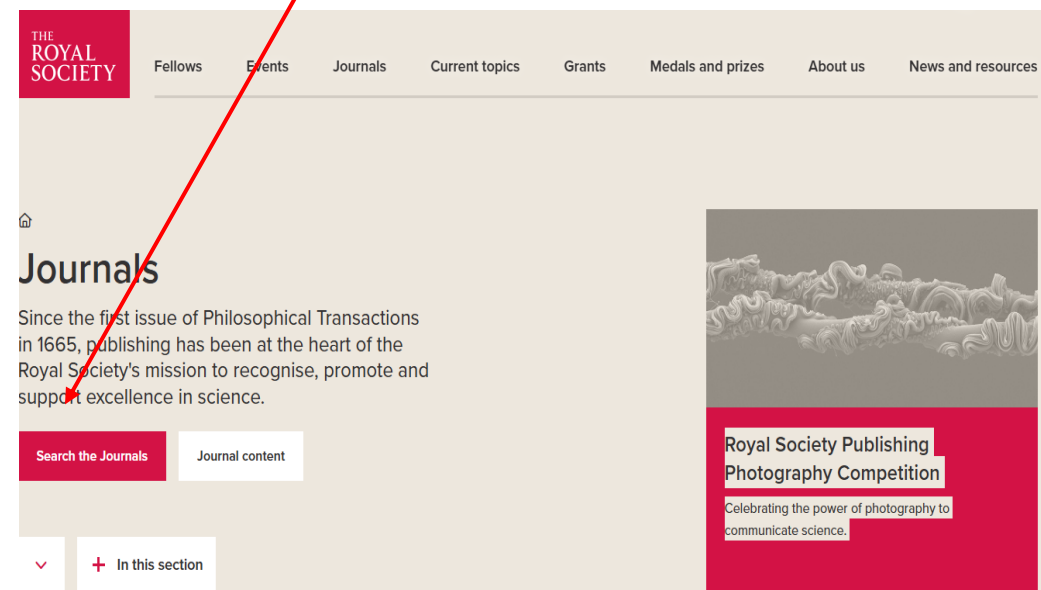

A part of routine cardiac examination, images of Masson-Trichrome stained transverse myocardial slices
